Over half of the field were first-time ultrarunners, who certainly could have picked an easier course for their initiation. This run became a bit of a mudfest, and some course markings had been washed away by the previous night's rain. However, the run went off with nary a hitch thanks in large part to the work of the NEODeads (Northeast Ohio Dead Runners) at aid stations. Thanks are also due to Leo Lightner for assistance with course layout and markings.
